Introduction from Cathryn Ross, Chief Executive

Water is not a dry issue.

The water sector in England and Wales has come a long way in the past 25 years. At privatisation, polluted beaches and rivers and neglected infrastructure meant we were seen as the ‘dirty man of Europe’.

The regulation of this sector was entrusted to the Water Services Regulation Authority (Ofwat) which has maintained a steady hand in driving and incentivising the sector to deliver and to improve. Over the period since privatisation, the water companies have invested more than £116 billion in maintaining and improving services for consumers and the environment. Today, for example, the amount of water lost through leaks is down by about a third since the mid-1990s. In addition, salmon have returned to the River Mersey, once considered one of the most polluted in Europe. All of this has been delivered efficiently too – a litre of tap water, supplied and taken away, costs less than half a penny.

But the world is changing. The water sector faces new problems and very different challenges. In the future, climate change may mean we get more droughts and more floods, making it harder to maintain resilient supplies. Our population is growing, putting more pressure on the water we use. Lifestyle changes have increased our appetite for water in our homes, our work places and our places of leisure. The changing social and economic landscape also means we need to reconsider how business operates and how customers are able to afford their water and sewerage bills.

Ofwat needs to be at forefront of determining and implementing a regulatory system that will protect customers’ interests, drive efficiencies and innovation, enable efficient companies to finance their functions and to ensure that the ‘promises of privatisation’ are delivered. We all need sustainable solutions to these problems.

To do this, Ofwat needs to be at the very top of its game. We need to have confidence that the companies in the sector are resilient – and make sure that others can have confidence in this through improving transparency. We also want to be able to identify the financial, structural or systematic risks to customers over time, and step in where we need to intervene. A successful applicant will support our aims in developing our monitoring and identifying the key risks, particularly focusing on building and maintaining our relationships with investors and analysts as well as analysing the financial information companies publish. We also expect them to support any action we do need to take.

Thank you for your interest in joining Ofwat at what is a very exciting time for us. We look forward to receiving your application.

Cathryn Ross
Ofwat Chief Executive

About Ofwat and the role

Ofwat (the Water Services Regulation Authority) is the economic regulator of the water and wastewater sector in England and Wales. Our role is to help it build trust and confidence with customers, the environment and wider society.

Every five years, Ofwat sets price determinations for the water and sewerage companies it regulates. Ofwat is currently in the process of determining the methodology it will apply for setting the price determinations and will publish a draft methodology in July 2017 and final in December 2017. This methodology will include the approach to assessing the efficient financing costs of companies and will require Ofwat to develop a financial model on which the price determinations will be set.

The period through to 2019 will require us to build the strength, capabilities and resilience of our policy teams to ensure that we can deliver the full scope of our ambitious programme of work.

There are opportunities for enthusiastic, motivated people to join the Water 2020 programme and have a significant impact on its successful delivery. As a Senior Associate, these opportunities will involve supporting delivery of specific projects within a large, multi-disciplinary programme, having exposure to a wide range of policy areas, and being given a chance to really make your mark within the industry.

All of our staff are allocated to one of a number of resource pools and work flexibly across a range of programmes. The successful applicant will be part of our Analytics resource pool.

Analytics resource pool

Members of the Analytics resource pool are flexibly deployed across the full range of programmes. The successful applicant is expected to be allocated to our Water2020 programme and may also need to work flexibly on other programmes, as required.

Our Analytics resource pool plays an important role in delivering our strategy and our analytics people are economists, economic and financial modellers, corporate finance/ investor relations experts, regulatory accountants and engineers. They apply specialist professional expertise, and tools and techniques to economic regulation, as well as providing timely, high quality analysis, advice and solutions to ensure successful delivery of our programmes.

Role expectations

Ofwat (the Water Services Regulation Authority) is the economic regulator of the water and wastewater sector in England and Wales. Our role is to help it build trust and confidence with customers, the environment and wider society. Our strategic priorities include:

- delivering the reforms provided for in the Water Act 2014 and help to ensure that they deliver real benefits for water customers and society. This includes putting in place the arrangements for the opening of the non-household retail market to competition in April 2017. It also includes supporting the development of water trading and abstraction reform. Doing these things will require further changes to the way we set prices in our 2019 review;
- maintaining the confidence of investors in the water sector and our regulation of it, though this period of change; and
- developing the means by which we monitor the sector's performance against our vision of trust and confidence, and receive assurance from the sector.

Key deliverables

The successful candidate will play a key role in the delivery of the financial model for the next price control. This will include being responsible for:

- Contributing towards the development, delivery and implementation of the financial models<sup>1</sup> and financial modelling tools for the next price review.
- Working autonomously in building, populating and using financial models for projects throughout Ofwat.
- Ensuring the availability and adequacy of data to be used in models is of sufficient quality by establishing procedures for collecting and manipulating information and building in appropriate checks and controls.
- Providing good quality, timely financial modelling advice to other professional groups, in a way that non specialists can readily understand.
- Creating an understanding of the context and application of financial modelling tools and techniques within Ofwat.

<sup>1</sup> The financial models for the previous price controls are here. We intend to build on these for the next price control and significant development has already taken place.
