This is a formal document that alerts our stakeholders to a change in the way that we regulate the water sector in England and Wales.

Expectations, assurance and information requirements for water company charges for 2018-19

This document sets out, for stakeholders, how we expect water companies¹ to engage with customers and stakeholders when developing their charging policy and charges, as well as our expectations around charges assurance. It also summarises the charges information requirements on companies and the timetable for publishing this information.

This document should be read in conjunction with our charging rules (see below).

Overview of our charging rules

Water companies are allowed to charge for the services they provide. Following amendments made by the Water Act 2014 (WA14) to the Water Industry Act 1991 (WIA91), we have issued charging rules that water companies must comply with. These are:

- Wholesale charging rules (issued in November 2016) for the wholesale services² they provide to water supply and/or sewerage services licensees
- Charges Scheme Rules (issued in November 2015 and amended in December 2016) setting out end-user charges to their own residential and business customers

¹ By “water companies” we mean companies holding appointments as water and/or sewerage undertakers under the Water Industry Act 1991, including both ‘large’ and ‘small’ water companies (see footnote 7).

² Wholesale services are the physical delivery of water via networks of pipes to and from customers’ property boundaries, including abstracting, treating and transporting water, as well as collecting, treating and disposing of wastewater.

- Charging Rules for New Connection Services \(English Undertakers\) (issued in August 2017) which apply only to English undertakers' charges for new connection services³.

If we consider a company is not complying with charging rules, we can intervene by taking targeted and proportionate action to protect customers.

Our expectations

Water companies need to be transparent about how they set charges. Customers and other stakeholders expect water company charges to comply with all relevant statutory obligations, including our charging rules. They also expect water companies to engage meaningfully on proposed charges and ensure that the information they publish is subject to high-quality assurance. Where new charging policies are introduced which lead to a significant⁴ increase in charges, we expect companies to have met a high evidential bar including:

- appropriate third party support for why the changes are being proposed, for example, a change in drivers or activity
- proven interactions with customers
- evidence of engagement with and support from customer representatives, where appropriate, especially with the Consumer Council for Water (CCWater) on changes to Charges Schemes for which it is a statutory consultee.

The information we expect companies to publish under the charging rules are set out in tables 1 and 2 below.

Engagement when setting charges

It is for companies to take ownership of their charging policies and charges, and deliver these in an efficient and innovative way, supported by customers and other stakeholders. Company Boards are responsible for company charges and the processes and policies that underpin the charges.

Our charging rules outline the need for timely, proportionate and effective engagement between water companies, their customers and wider stakeholders. The benefits of good engagement are two way. It allows companies to better understand their customers' requirements in terms of services and

³ New connection services include gaining access to existing public water or sewerage system and or creating a new water main or public sewer or a monopoly company taking over responsibility for a self-laid infrastructure. These rules apply only to water companies whose areas are wholly or mainly in England the price that customers are willing to pay. And it allows customers and other stakeholders to be clear on the basis of the charges they will face and what is driving changes to those charges.

Board assurance of charges

We expect water companies to publish all their charges set under our charging rules in either their Charges Schemes, Wholesale Charges Schedules⁵ or new connection services Charging Arrangements⁶, as appropriate. For each set of charges, a company should:

- provide an assurance statement from its Board of Directors that the charges comply with legal obligations and the relevant charging rules, and that the company has systems and processes in place to ensure that the charging information published is accurate; and
- ensure that its Board assurance statement covers the list of specific issues for assurance set out in each set of charging rules.

Water companies should not limit assurance to the issues listed in the charging rules if they believe it would be beneficial to provide additional assurance. Where appropriate, we may add to the list of specific issues requiring assurance.

High quality assurance is important in providing stakeholders with trust and confidence in the charges water companies' apply and the information companies publish about their charges. The company monitoring framework (CMF) assesses the quality of companies' assurance of published information and can cover any aspect of assurance. We have specifically considered assurance of charging in previous CMF assessments. We may also choose to raise issues directly with companies at other times if appropriate.

Statement of significant changes in charges

In addition to the Board assurance statement, we require each large water company to publish on its website a statement setting out details of any significant increases it anticipates in its Wholesale Charges Schedule and/or Charges Scheme. We have set out in the annexes of both sets of charging rules what we expect companies to include in this statement.

Where a water company anticipates significant changes to its Wholesale Charges Schedule and Charges Scheme, its Board should address this in the Board assurance statement. The Board should provide assurance that they are aware of the changes and related incidence effects, and support the company's engagement on this issue.

Specific information requirements for 2018-19 charges

We have set out in table 1 the charges information for 2018-19 that we require water companies to publish, and their respective deadlines. Companies should note that the amount of information we need, and when we need it, varies between large and small companies⁷ (see tables 1 and 2 respectively for further details).

Companies do not need to send us electronic copies of these documents; just providing us with correct links to the relevant pages on their websites will suffice. We need this to monitor some specific aspects of charges.

Average bills for residential customers

We require each large water company to send us average bills data for residential customers. This comprises data on residential customer numbers and revenues resulting from the application of residential end-user charges. We have attached a template to this document for water companies to capture and send us this data (see table 1 for when this information should be submitted).

Since 2014-15, we have shared average bills information with Water UK for publication on its website. We will continue with this approach for 2018-19.

Bulk supply register

We continue to require water companies (including new appointees) to provide us with information about their bulk supply transactions. We publish this information annually on our website in our bulk supply register.

For water, the register complements our new market information requirements for water resources set out in 'Water resources market information guidance'. Greater market information will support the effective optimisation of water resources, including demand management and leakage services, across England and Wales.

As part of our review of existing market information, we have reviewed the information in the bulk supply register and as a result have revised the spreadsheet information capture template by:

- separating out and adding key information requirements to increase transparency, this includes separate tabs for water and sewage;
- adding a definitions table to ensure consistent reporting; and
- providing space for companies to comment on each bulk supply.

We expect water companies (including new appointees) to use this revised template to submit their bulk supply data. They should complete all three parts of each table, keeping in mind the field definitions stated in the template, and submit the information to FinanceAndGovernance@ofwat.gsi.gov.uk, stating the subject matter of their email as: Bulk supply transactions (see table 1 and 2 for when this information should be submitted).

Special agreements notification

Water companies are required under section 142(6A) of WIA91 to notify us of any new special agreements they enter into after 13 July 2014. (New special agreements include those that existed before this date which have subsequently been re-negotiated after 13 July 2014.) They should send such notifications to FinanceAndGovernance@ofwat.gsi.gov.uk, and can do so anytime of the year. They should state the subject matter of their email as: New special agreements notifications.

Submissions and enquires

Companies should send all other submissions and any questions about this document to FinanceAndGovernance@ofwat.gsi.gov.uk. They should state the subject matter of their email as: Charges - information requirements for 2018-19.

Information requirements and deadlines

In the tables below, we set out the information we expect water companies to publish in connection with their 2018-19 charges in order to comply with our charging rules, and for our own purposes. It sets out the items to be published, the deadlines and the specific sections of the charging rules or licence conditions under which this is being required.

The first four items in table 1 set out the information requirements for the early notifications of wholesale charges, as set out in annexes A2 to A5 of the Wholesale charging rules.
